ABOUT

Emily is a lifelong Texan and a talented singer who has been dreaming of holding a microphone since her first talent show in third grade. She's also been dreaming of leaving her hometown, and knows that bigger things are out there – all she has to do is take a leap of faith, but it's easier said than done. Tired of local gigs, she wants to prove that she can compete with the best of the best, and is ready to make the most of this opportunity.

THE DETAILS

- Emily got her love of singing from her mother who used to sing to her every day as a baby. One day, Emily sang back and she hasn't stopped since. Emily's mom knew she'd be singing forever when she saw her in the third grade talent show. Emily said that she was so hard on herself and such a perfectionist that her family just knew she'd be committed to singing forever.
- To pay the bills, Emily is now a nanny to three kids – aged 12, 10 and 7. She loves being able to be a part of their family, and will even sing for them if they're not too embarrassed by her. When not at work, Emily currently sings in a local band at small shows around the city.
- Growing up, Emily threw herself into as many competitions as humanly possible. Whether it was a talent show, or a radio contest, Emily wanted to prove to everyone who was the best singer in San Antonio. In sixth grade, she won Country Kid of the Year in a local radio station contest.
- Everyone in Emily's family has been a San Antonio lifer, and she wants to break that mold. She often does things in life "for the plot" and is looking for the next great story. Emily is ready to write her own chapter and knows that this competition is the prologue to an epic novel.
