ABOUT

Brandin is a director for a performing arts school that his mom founded. After moving from Connecticut to Atlanta at age 7, Brandin through himself into music and never looked back. He now works at the same school he attended, and has a self-proclaimed eye for finding talent. He helped create the girl group Pink Heart back in 2016, and has written songs for various girl groups ever since. He's here solo and ready to boast his own talent for the judges.

THE DETAILS

- Brandin's love affair with music began in infancy. His mother, a vocal coach, taught in their living room, and Brandin eagerly joined in, learning from his earliest role model. Some of his fondest childhood memories are of vocal practice with her. When he was 10-years-old, Brandin's mother founded a performing arts school in Atlanta. Brandin's talent blossomed there, igniting a lifelong passion for music.
- Brandin loved the school so much that after college he decided to come back and accept the position of Director for the Performing Arts. For Brandin, there is no greater joy than seeing the next generation of performers find their voices in real-time. He is known for putting on extravagant productions that incorporate all of his favorite genres of music.
- He delights in defying expectations from others. While some may assume he only knows R&B, Brandin relishes singing a musical theater ballad or soft rock radio hit just as much as any smooth R&B hit.
- Singing has been Brandin's passion since he was born, and he couldn't imagine doing anything else. He's now ready for his moment in the sun, and wants to show his students, and himself, that anything is possible if you are determined and do what you love.

Casting Note: He was on Songland in 2019.
