ABOUT

An Ohio native, Daniel grew up in an encouraging household that always pushed him to be great. He has always had high standards for himself - he even graduated high school early so he could see all the world had to offer. A bartender and caterer, he knows the definition of hard work, but also knows how to turn it up when the lights are brightest. As lead singer of a band, he carries himself with an assuredness of a front man but has faced enough failure to know not to take anything for granted.

THE DETAILS

- ① Daniel grew up with three siblings and two parents who always encourage their kids to pursue the arts – in fact, it’s how his parents met. They were both in a community theater production of West Side Story and it was “love at first rehearsal.” Daniel always knew he wanted to get out of Ohio, and he graduated in three years with a 4.0 GPA. College wasn’t for him, so he dropped out of NYU after a year and tried to figure it out on his own.
- ② In 2019, he was cast as one of the leads in the Broadway rendition of Almost Famous. Unfortunately for him, the play was scheduled to debut in March 2020... and so his career got sidetracked before it started. Daniel realized his favorite part of the musical was the singing, so he packed his bags and moved to Nashville to start his own band.
- ③ After a few months, Daniel learned guitar and started his own band Disco Fox. While they don’t play any disco, they play whatever music gets the crowd going. He’s known for doing his signature splits on stage and uses his experience as a stage performer to make every show feel like a big performance. He says his alter ego comes out on stage – “The Fox” – who is very different from who he is off stage.
- ④ Daniel has lived several musical lives, but the one common thread has always been the love of singing. Now settled into pursuing his passion, he wants to take advantage of every opportunity thrown his way, just as he always has since he was a kid. Daniel is ready to take the competition by storm and bring out “The Fox” when he competes on The One & Only.
