ABOUT

Spencer is a lifelong Floridian who grew up with parents in broadcasting. Her dad is a Miami Marlins broadcaster and mom is a newscaster, so she was always around a stage growing up. But right away she knew that reporting wasn't for her, and so she started taking vocal lessons as early as 5-years-old. Since then, she's had the opportunity to perform at small clubs and large venues—including the national anthem at her dad's home ball park. She wants to prove that the family has not only a talent for broadcasting, but music, and will prove it on The One & Only.

THE DETAILS

- She grew up in South Florida, and after her parents divorced when she was 5, her mom remarried and decided to have triplets. TV is in her blood: her dad is a sportscaster for the Miami Marlins and her mom is a news anchor.
- Spencer never wanted to do sports or news, but knew she wanted to be in entertainment. She always felt pressure to succeed in a family of successful broadcasters, but despite that pressure, Spencer has pushed forward to craft her own version of success. Spencer has been in singing lessons since she was 5, and has always known deep down that she wanted to be a singer.
- To make ends meet, Spencer is a model who works in bottle service at night at a popular club in Orlando that artists often frequent. Just the other week, 50 Cent showed up looking to party.
- She sings at a club when she's not working bottle service, and will cover Adele, Ariana Grande, and Lady Gaga while people are eating dinner.
- She thrives under pressure, with no better example than when she sang the national anthem at the Marlins game. They needed a last minute fill-in, and with almost no prep time Spencer sang the anthem in front of 26,000 people and delivered.
- Spencer lives her life "main character energy," which means that she carries herself with the confidence of someone who knows they are the lead in their own life.
- Spencer has been in the spotlight ever since she was a kid. She has the confidence and comfortability on stage that her parents passed down, but with her own vocal spin. Spencer is ready to make her family proud on The One & Only.
